OUR EXPOSITION.

How It Looks To-day—Tobacco—Premises—Horticultural Awards.

There has not been quite as large a crowd in attendance to-day, owing to the incessant drizzling rain, but those who have visited the building have in every case expressed themselves highly satisfied. The displays in all departments are very nearly complete; in fact, so few in number are the unfinished displays, that it detracts very little from the general appearance of things and would probably never be noticed by a casual observer. Power Hall, however, must be made an exception to the above, for the exhibition of the machinery goes for nothing unless it is in motion, which is at present a thing impracticable in the least degree. Preparations are being made to set everything in motion by to-night.

HORTICULTURAL HALL—THE AWARDS.

Probably in no department of our Exposition has more substantial progress in the right direction been made than in the Horticultural display. Every year adds to the interest as well as the excellence, both of the collections and of the individual specimens shown. When our big show was first undertaken, Horticultural Hall was a dreary sea of different plants, arranged in a haphazard manner with a view to surprise the public with the vastness of the numbers huddled into the space assigned to the plant display and to picturesque effect, than for any intrinsic excellence which they possessed. Now, while it is true that some of the collections need to be pretty well pruned of much that is indifferent, if not indeed worthless. Still there are some collections of plants in Horticultural Hall to-day, exhibited both by professional gardeners and by amateurs, that merit the very highest encomiums. Any one acquainted with rare and curious plants may find subjects of the liveliest interest and of continued interest in a visit there. The competition among the gardeners to excel each other has led them to ransack the best collections attainable in this country, and in many cases to import from Europe.

The desire to excel the gardeners has led our cultivated amateurs to gather from every attainable source the choicest specimens to be found either at home or abroad. So that Cincinnati, through the direct influence of her Exposition, bids fair at no distant day to achieve that distinction in horticulture which has been accorded her in art. We had intended to particularize some of the plants and collections of plants most interesting to the examiner. The number of rare specimens are so numerous that we could only do so by a list as long as a catalogue, while the jury that has made the awards seem to have done their duty faithfully and fully, and probably these will be later indications to point the general public where to look for what is most interesting among the large collections than anything we might suggest.

The jury consisted of Lewis Guernsey, formerly connected with the Botanical Gardens of Harvard College, but now of Boston; Mr. Gottlieb Grauel, for many years gardener for the late Nicholas Longworth, and more recently of Larz Anderson's garden, and J. B. Chadwick, of Newport and No. 5 East Fourth street, city.

The display in Horticultural Hall might be made finer if the collections were very materially cut down. There are a great many plants put in that should not be; they are entered seemingly to fill up space. If in the collection there were put in one or two fine specimens of each, it would be much more interesting to persons who go to see the improvements made horticulturally from year to year.

Some of the amateur collections are superb. There is Mr. Davie, of College Hill, and Mr. Fisher, of Cincinnati, who deserve especial mention for merit in this direction. Also, some of the collections of the gardeners are very fine, it might be said, extraordinary. It is amazing what vast improvements have been made in the last few years, and it is very gratifying to those who are fond of plants.

In some of the sections the plants and collections of plants entered are so indifferent that the jury declined to make any award, which was in accordance with Rule 10, which provides that "no article exhibited will be entitled to an award unless they possess points of superiority." We think that this ruling on the part of the jury will have a beneficial effect on future exhibitions of this nature.

Railroad Accident.

A heavy lumber train on the O. & M. railroad was ditched yesterday a mile west of Dillsboro, Ind., which resulted in the killing of three lads, aged between 9 and 13 years. The boys at the time were stealing a ride and were standing between the cars.

By the sudden stop of the train, when it was detached, the lads were thrown between the bumpers of the cars and crushed to death. None of the employees of the road knew them, consequently we were unable to learn their names. They resided in and about Dillsboro, Ind.

The cars that were wrecked were three in number, but no damage beyond considerable delay was occasioned. The passenger trains, which were due here at 7 and 11 1/2 o'clock last night, did not arrive until 1 o'clock this morning. To-day the trains are running as usual.

The English lake district is being ruined by railways, factories and coal smoke. Wordsworth's Ambleside bridge, threatened, which has led to a petition to the House of Commons against the nuisance.
